

LIVING-LEARNING COMMUNITIES

provide students with an immersive experience that connects classroom learning with their residential lives. Living-Learning Communities help to broaden students' perspectives, provide them with a sense of community, and enhance academic success. The Parlors and other social spaces on the quad, such as the Patios and Lounges, are vital to creating these Living-Learning Communities. The renovated, light-filled spaces will contribute to a renewed sense of community and the quad will once again be a hub of the campus!

“The Chancellor’s decision to protect the historic place of the Quad speaks to our school’s enduring philosophy of residential living and learning. This project awakens my deepest memories of the past and strengthens my hopes for the future.”

Emily Herring Wilson '61

Along with Aycock Auditorium, the Alumni House and the Chancellor’s House, the quad is a important part of UNCG’s history. UNCG has committed to a major renovation of all seven residence halls which make up the quad. For many who lived in Bailey, Coit, Cotten, Gray, Hinshaw, Jamison, or Shaw, the quad was a very special place.

OUR CAMPAIGN TO RAISE $1,000,000 FOR THE QUAD!

The goal of the Quad Campaign is to raise $1 Million in support of the university's efforts to upgrade the quad residence halls (Bailey, Coit, Cotten, Gray, Hinshaw, Jamison and Shaw). These renovations will provide students with updated living quarters as well as areas where they can gather to relax, study, meet in small groups and enjoy the activities that will enhance their undergraduate experience. The parlors are a central focus of these upgrades. These new light-filled spaces will contribute to the renewed sense of community in each building. Naming opportunities are available in each of the residence halls and for patios and benches located throughout the quad.
