Textiles, Teachers and Troops

Textiles, Teachers, and Troops makes available more than 175,000 digital images including photographs, manuscripts, rare books, scrapbooks, printed materials, and oral histories documenting the social and cultural development of Greensboro. For the first time, all five colleges and universities in Greensboro, along with the Greensboro Historical Museum, have collaborated on a project to make primary source materials available online. By documenting the vitally important influence of the textile industry, public and postsecondary education, and the massive World War II military presence, Textiles, Teachers, and Troops provides context for understanding the growth of Greensboro from a town of two thousand residents into one of the leading manufacturing and education centers in the Southeast. The project, coordinated by the Digital Projects unit in the University Libraries at UNCG, was made possible in large measure through funding from the federal Institute of Museum and Library Services (IMLS) under the provisions of the Library Services and Technology Act (LSTA) as administered by the State Library of North Carolina, a division of the Department of Cultural Resources. Among the most significant materials related to the textile industry in Greensboro are the Bernard Cone Photograph Albums and the Cone Mills White Oak Plant Stereo Card Photographs. Digitizing these collections makes available for the first time over 1500 images of life in Greensboro’s textile mills and mill villages. The Cone photographs are particularly unique in that they were taken by a member of the Cone family, allowing something of an “insider” perspective into the spaces and the social and labor history that are preserved in the images.

The project partners for Textiles, Teachers, and Troops were selected due to their roles as leaders in the preservation and presentation of cultural heritage in Greensboro. Each holds responsibility for a different and unique perspective on the history and shared culture of the city.

- UNCG University Libraries is the lead institution for the project and provided content, digitization, metadata creation, website hosting, and long-term storage of archival masters. Most of the content was provided by the Martha Blakeney Hodges Special Collections and University Archives.
- The Holgate Library is the library serving Bennett College, a historically black college established in 1873 which has been an active part of Greensboro’s history, particularly during civil rights movement. The Holgate Library provided content and metadata for the project.
- The Brock Historical Museum of Greensboro College preserves the history of the College, life at the College, and the College’s relation to and influence on both the surrounding communities and society in general. The Brock Museum provided content and metadata for the project.
- The Friends Historical Collection is the archival repository of Guilford College. Guilford College provided item selection and metadata creation and also assisted with the creation of contextual materials.

- The Greensboro Historical Museum is the principal collector, interpreter and exhibitor of Greensboro's history. The museum provided significant content and performed much of the digitization and metadata creation of these resources onsite.
- The Greensboro Public Library is the municipal library system of the City of Greensboro and is home to the North Carolina Collection of local history resources. The library provided content and some metadata for the project.
- The Bluford Library of North Carolina Agricultural and Technical State University serves the campus of the largest historically black university in North Carolina. Some digitization and metadata was done onsite at N.C. A&T State and some at UNCG.

The Digital Media Commons

The Digital Media Commons and DACTS Studio have become very popular spaces with students. This year, some of the space was converted in order to support changing campus needs in gaming and maker space (3D printing). The DMC Gaming Lab was made possible through the generous support of the UNCG College of Arts and Sciences, Lloyd International Honors College, Undergraduate Studies, and the University Libraries. Professor Grieve uses the DMC Gaming Lab to teach three courses on religion and video games (HSS206, REL207, and RCO223). During non-instruction hours, the Gaming Lab is open to faculty, staff, and students. The Gaming Lab has four Xbox gaming consoles available for reservation. Patrons may also check out a limited number of games and game controllers at the DMC service desk. The Makerbot Replicator 2X 3D printer is the first stage of UNCG Libraries' entry into the maker space movement. The Replicator can print models in one or two colors, using spools of durable ABS plastic. During the printing process, ABS plastic filament is extruded through a nozzle onto a heated surface to build up a solid object layer by layer. We hosted a successful open house in February to showcase these new spaces to the UNCG community. Further information about the UNCG Libraries Makerspace can be found at the following webpage: <http://uncg.libguides.com/makerspace> and more about the DMC can be found on the website: <http://library.uncg.edu/spaces/dmc/>

Born Digital Records Management Tool

Digital preservation is a major nationwide issue and topic of much discussion. The staff at the UNCG University Libraries is tackling issues aggressively with a newly-created tool aimed at acquiring, managing, and preserving important digital archival files now so that researchers – now and in the future – can have greater insight into how our university and society as a whole operates. This development puts UNCG ahead of most other institutions in terms of proactively addressing digital preservation.

The new tool – called Born-Digital Records Management or BDRM – is a collaboration between two UNCG Libraries departments: Martha Blakeney Hodges Special Collections and University Archives (SCUA) and Electronic Resources and Information Technology (ERIT). In preserving university history, for instance, it allows University Libraries to actively acquire electronic newsletters, presentations, web sites and other materials that typically lose information and operability if printed.

While an archivist may simply find a Civil War era diary that is still perfectly readable, the accessibility of a chance find is much less likely in the digital world. With their work on BDRM, the University Libraries is ensuring that valuable records aren't lost due to file deterioration or technological obsolescence.

New Liaison Model

For over twenty years the University Libraries have assigned liaisons to all UNCG academic departments and programs. Liaisons provide essential services to their departments by conducting research consultations for faculty and students, tailoring solutions to their particular research needs, collaborating on developing research assignments, creating online tutorials and providing information literacy sessions for students. In addition, they work to build print and electronic collections essential to research and teaching in each discipline. This liaison program allows librarians to become more knowledgeable about the research and curriculum of those departments to which they are assigned. In many cases, librarians have very close ties and function as teaching and research partners with faculty in their liaison departments. Liaisons also serve as a communication link between the Libraries and academic units.

Over the past two years the Libraries examined the roles and responsibilities of our liaisons in order to enhance service to the campus community. We wanted liaisons to spend more time on information literacy and working closely with faculty and students on their research and scholarly communication issues. At the same time we sought to refine our collection management operations to ensure that we're purchasing what our community needs in the most efficient and cost effective manner possible. To begin the process we appointed a task force that completed its report in September 2012. The major recommendation was to move to a team structure with subject and functional teams. Three subject teams (humanities, social sciences and sciences) were formed to group liaisons with similar discipline responsibilities. Functional teams work on activities related to the most essential tasks for liaisons: instruction, scholarly communications and collections. Reference Desk services are coordinated by a functional team which oversees the chat service as well as working with users in the library. In-depth research help from subject liaisons is also available, matching users more closely with the expertise of individual librarians.

By encouraging librarians to develop close ties with faculty and students, the new liaison structure allows librarians to take the library to the students and faculty, both in person and electronically. Working with librarians who fully understand disciplinary conventions and research priorities is an effective way to facilitate student learning and faculty research. We are in the process of implementing the team structure and will evaluate its effectiveness after one year.

High Impact Practices and the University Libraries

A recent report prepared by members of our faculty addresses the University Libraries' significant role in participating in the high impact initiatives identified by the AAC&U's LEAP Report and adopted by UNCG in its Strategic Plan 2009-14. These practices are proven to impact student success positively. By collaborating closely with faculty and Student Affairs in these activities, the Libraries contribute significantly to student success and retention. This report provides examples primarily from the 2012-13 academic year.

The High Impact Practices

- First-Year Seminars and Experiences
- Learning Communities and Residential Colleges
- Common Intellectual Experience
- Writing Intensive Courses
- Internships
- Capstone Courses
- Undergraduate Research
- Service Learning
- Collaborative assignments
- Diversity/Global Learning

The University Libraries strongly support all of these high impact initiatives through a variety of programs, initiatives and resources:

- A dedicated librarian who focuses on the First-Year Experience for 50% of her time and is embedded in the curriculum. Nearly 200 class sessions are provided each year for first-year students. The Libraries also participate actively in Student Affairs first-year activities and recruiting events. The Special Collections and University Archives (SCUA) Department collaborated with a professor in the English Department in using primary resources to develop critical thinking skills with over 200 freshmen.

- Assigned liaisons to all Learning and Living-Learning Communities. With over 25 communities this is a major initiative at UNCG. The Libraries collaborate closely with all LLCs and liaisons provide information literacy sessions, satellite reference and co-curricular programming.
- A strong print and electronic collection. The Libraries' resources provide needed support for Writing Intensive Courses, Capstone Courses and Undergraduate Research. Most electronic resources are available 24/7 from any location. SCUA provides unique manuscript and archival resources, in both print and digital formats.
- A liaison for each UNCG department or program. Liaisons provide individual or small group research consultations for students and faculty, as well as information literacy sessions, collections information and general communication between the Libraries and the unit.
- Online research and instruction support. The Libraries develop LibGuides (online research guides) that identify and provide access to useful information resources. In addition, there are over 50 tutorials that students and faculty may use 24/7 from any location.
- Opportunities for students. Internships, primarily for graduate students in Library and Information Studies, are available in many departments of the Libraries. Each year the Libraries award an Undergraduate Research Award to recognize a paper or project that successfully uses information resources.
- Support for digital media. The Digital Media Commons, in collaboration with Undergraduate Studies' Digital Action, Consultation and Training Studio (DACTS), provides resources and services for students to create and refine multimedia projects, an important 21st Century skill.
- Space for collaboration. The Libraries provide a variety of group spaces that students may reserve online to work on collaborative projects. Some rooms are equipped with technology, and all have white boards.
- A strong commitment to diversity. Diversity among the staff and diversity awareness in customer service practice is supported through staff assignments, hosting international guides, staff training and resource development.

Part 3 – Institutional Effectiveness

University Libraries Institutional Effectiveness 2013-2014

LibQual+™ Narrative comments – Quiet Space

The Libraries conducted the LibQual+™ survey in Fall 2012. Over 250 qualitative comments were analyzed in spring and summer 2013. One of the major issues identified from the comments were concerns about the need for more quiet study space and better enforcement of current quiet spaces. The Libraries also receive communication about such concerns through the suggestion boxes. To remedy the situation the Libraries developed two initiatives. One was to revamp the signage on all the Tower floors to delineate more clearly what areas are designated as quiet space. Bold and colorful signs greet people as they step off the elevator of each Tower floor. A second was to convert the Faculty Research Rooms on Tower 2 to be available on the scheduling system so that they may be reserved by students for up to 2 hours. These are small rooms with doors that are suitable for one to two people.

Faculty Research Survey

In spring 2013 the University Libraries, Information Technology Services and the Office of Research and Economic Development conducted a survey to determine faculty needs regarding storing and sharing data, assistance needed with managing and storing data and their priorities for these services. The impetus for this survey was two-fold. First, many funding agencies require data management plans (DMP) as part of their requirements. In addition, UNCG adopted a policy in 2012, “Access to and Retention of Research Data,” that outlines the rights and responsibilities of investigators and the institution in the use, retention, and maintenance of data produced during the research process.

The survey’s results helped us determine priorities and focus future staffing and other resources to ensure that faculty have the support they need for their research. Questions were included regarding the format of their research data, how they store and backup data, how they share/disseminate data, data management plans, what support they currently receive and their priorities for future support.

Results indicated that the priorities for faculty were storage and backup of all types of data (numerical, digital humanities, audio/video) and assistance with sharing and data management plans. The survey also indicated faculty were not following best practices for storing data nor did they seem aware of data sharing requirements.

Follow up on the survey from the Libraries included collaborating with the Office of Sponsored Programs on the DMPTool. The Libraries provide social science data storage at no cost through the Odum Institute at UNC Chapel Hill. The Libraries developed a LibGuide with information about data management plans and sharing options. This guide will be enhanced to provide additional information about resources for faculty. Data are accessible through the Libraries’ institutional repository, NC DOCKS.

Budget reductions

To prepare for the University’s budget cut for 2014/15, the University Libraries Collection Management Team began planning in August 2013. The team used an intensive, data-driven analysis of our collections to minimize the negative impact on faculty and students. In establishing cancellation targets, the team gathered, normalized, and analyzed a wide variety of data sources including usage, inflation, cost, impact, and relevance to research and the curriculum. Based on the data analysis, the team prepared reports and presented these to the library subject liaisons for their reaction. Once we had their feedback we developed a webpage to disseminate information to the campus community on March 28th, 2014 so that faculty could respond. Final budget cuts were based on all the data and actions above.

Staff Development and Recognition Activities

Over the past three years, the University Libraries conducted staff morale and workplace climate assessments in order to focus efforts on controllable issues related to staff development and improving the workplace environment. This effort began with a standardized survey instrument called ClimateQUAL, developed by the Association of Research Libraries, and followed by focus groups and other clarification surveys. Several actions took place to heighten employee awareness of their contributions and provide a forum for communication and collaboration. Highlights of these initiatives include:

- A revamped Staff Development Committee charged with programming and soliciting feedback as to staff members' desires and development needs. New activities include an annual Staff Development Week that with recognition events and several learning opportunities. Single events are also scheduled throughout the year. Programs include personal enrichment, job-related skills, health and fitness, teamwork, career enhancement and communication techniques and styles.
- Additional all-personnel meetings were scheduled and changed to a Town-hall format rather than presentations. This format encourages more discussion, diverse viewpoints and general participation. Agendas are sent out in advance so that staff members have a chance to prepare.
- Enhanced opportunities were developed for improved communication between SPA and EPA staff. These includes sharing presentations and collaborating on projects and information sessions that further explain the role of both professional and para-professional activities.
- An online staff portal, "Behind the Stacks," was developed to improve communication. It provides daily announcements of events and also links to a wide variety of blogs that provide organizational information, campus news and staff member's personal events.

These efforts have improved morale and provided Libraries' staff with more job satisfaction during times of shrinking budgets.

Tenure Attainment Recognition Committee:

Charge: The Promotion and Tenure Attainment Recognition Committee is a joint committee of the University Libraries and the Office of the Provost. It is responsible for organizing an event to recognize UNCG faculty who have been promoted and/or granted tenure. Honorees may select a book, film, or CD-ROM to be added to the University Libraries collections. A book plate recognizing the honoree is placed in the resource. The culminating event is a reception for the honorees and guests, the Chancellor, the Provost, the deans, each honoree's department head and Library Liaison, and the committee members. Customized READ posters, created for each honoree, are presented at the event. A display of all the resources is set up at the reception and subsequently placed in display cases in Jackson Library.

Part 6 – Significant Achievements

2013-2014 – University Libraries’ Significant Achievements

Rosann Bazirjian gave three presentations this year. One presentation was on advancement and special collections, and was given at the ALADN Foundations of Philanthropy 2014 Conference. She also spoke at the TALA, Triad Academic Libraries Association, Paraprofessional Conference on skill sets for library employees. Finally, she gave a brief presentation at the November meeting of ASERL, the Association of Southeastern Research Libraries, on UNCG Libraries’ support of high impact practices. Rosann was elected to a four year term to OCLC’s Global Council, and she served on ASERL’s Nominating Committee this year. She served as a member of the TALA Paraprofessional Conference Planning Committee and currently serves as a member of the Galileo/Shakespeare Project Steering Committee.

Beth Bernhardt was the Program Chair for the 2013 Charleston Conference and the Co-Editor of the Charleston Conference Proceedings. She presented at ALA Mid-Winter in Philadelphia, Pennsylvania on institutional repositories and also on ILS migration issues. Beth also participated in a pre-conference on Data Driven decision making. Beth participated in an ASERL webinar on best practices in scholarly communications. Beth is on six national library advisory boards. Beth serves on three American Library Association, ALCTS division committees.

Kathy Bradshaw is the Human Resources Librarian and has responsibility for human resources issues including recruitment, staff development and employee relations. She is also responsible for sensitive confidential human resources issues such as employee benefits questions and disciplinary actions. During 2013, recruitment involved 10 employment vacancies throughout University Libraries; 5 librarians and 5 non-librarian positions. Kathy is currently Chair of the University Benefits Committee and is also the Affirmative Action Officer for University Libraries and a member of the Libraries’ Administrative Advisory Group. Kathy serves as the chair of the University Libraries Service Award Committee, and is a member of the Diversity and Staff Development Committees. She is a member of the American Library Association’s Library Leadership and Management Association (LLAMA) Staff Development Committee. Kathy was a panelist at the North Carolina Library Association Conference in October, “Stronger Together: Multicultural Competence-From Ideas to Workplace Organizational Development in Libraries” and at the same conference, presented “Looking for Professional Development in All the Wrong Places.”

Terry Brandsma chaired the Integrated Library System Committee and served on the Technology Lending Working Group, the Electronic Resources Librarian Search Committee, and the UNC-wide Automation & Networking Committee. Terry was also elected to a two-year term as one of four WMS Community Co-Chairs, tasked with planning and hosting online meetings and serving as a conduit to provide community feedback and suggestions to OCLC. He also assisted with the planning for the 2014 Southeast WMS Users Meeting. Much of his work this past year involved post-migration activities related to WorldShare Management Services and WorldCat Local. Terry also supported several library departments with Qualtrics surveys and MaxBulk Mailer email distribution. He contributed two conference presentations, two panels, one poster session, and coauthored one invited journal article for Serials Review (in process). He attended three professional conferences and over twenty professional seminars/workshops.

Tim Bucknall chaired the UNC System E-journal Efficiencies Working Group and was the primary author of a report analyzing the System's e-journal purchasing efficiency in 2012. For NC LIVE, he served on the Librarians' Council, the Web Advisory Committee, the Resource Advisory Committee, and the Data Analysis Task Force. As Founder and Convener of the Carolina Consortium, he helped the group save an aggregate of approximately $240 million over the past year. These efforts were commended by UNC System President Tom Ross. Tim was named ACRL Academic/Research Librarian of the Year for 2014.

Linda Burr was able to increase Jackson Society membership ($1000 and over) with two successful fund-raising projects. The University Libraries Friends of the Libraries took on a project to beautify the entrance to Jackson Library. We were able to raise $25,000 within a five month period. The second project was to raise additional funds to preserve Congressman Coble's papers. This was the third phase of funding efforts since 2009. We were able to secure another $14,420, bringing the total amount to over $60,000. Because of these projects, Jackson Society membership increased from 23 to 43 members for the year. Five of the new members outside of the projects, derived from ongoing cultivation efforts. Three out of the five were from the class of 1964 and were a part of our African American Oral History Project. This was their first gift to the University. We also received major gifts from three folks. Dorothy Rechel created a $25,000 charitable gift annuity (CGA) to support the Betty H. Carter Women Veterans Project. She has no other ties to UNCG outside of the project. Kathy and David Crowe set up two endowments to support staff development and SCUA with a will bequest. Patricia '51 and Ira Gruber established a $100,000 CGA for Dean's discretionary. They live in Texas and have been very supportive of the libraries over the years.

Mary Jane Conger chaired the University Libraries Peer Evaluation and Tenure Committee and spearheaded an effort to revise several documents used by tenured and tenured track faculty, bringing them up to newer University P&T standards. She shepherded two candidates through the last part of the tenure process, two additional candidates through reappointment and one through post tenure review. She also presented at two conferences with co-presenters on lessons learned and advice to others in the throes of data migration. Mary Jane continued to work with colleagues within and without the department, learning and sharing how Worldshare Management Systems could best be used to work behind the scenes more efficiently and search and display logically to our customers. She became a member of the WorldCat Discovery Advisory Group which previews and advises OCLC on its new WorldCat Discovery interface.

Richard Cox worked with SCUA and the ERIT development team to complete phase 2 of 3 of the new BDRM tool. He completed functionality and speed upgrades on the Digital Library on American Slavery, and have added the NC Runaway Slaves Project and Buncombe County Slave Deeds project to the search interface. Richard presented on our BDRM effort at the joint NC, SC, GA archivists conference in Greenville, SC and was invited to present at the Georgia State Archivists meeting, as well as at Wake Forest University. He was one of only 3 members of the UNCG Mobile Steering Committee, chosen for my expertise in mobile web development. All UNCG-branded applications must be vetted by this group. Richard has been newly-reappointed to the UNCG Internet Oversight Committee.

Anna Craft gave formal presentations at four library and archives conferences, including the North Carolina Library Association Biennial Conference and the Society of North Carolina Archivists Annual Meeting. She also led training sessions for local and regional audiences on NC DOCKS and Dataverse. She continues to be active in working with UNCG's LIS program as a guest lecturer and as a mentor, specializing in areas related to metadata and cataloging. Anna published a paper in the proceedings of the Charleston Conference and a book review in the North Carolina Library Association journal, North Carolina Libraries. In the fall of 2013, she was elected Vice Chair/Chair Elect of the Resources and Technical Services Section of NCLA. She continues to serve as a member of the UNCG Faculty Senate, and in that role she also serves as the Faculty Senate Liaison to the Faculty Committee on Intercollegiate Athletics.

Steve Cramer continues to co-teach MKT 426, International Marketing and ENT 300, Ideas to Opportunities: Feasibility Analysis. Both classes are research-intensive and community engaged classes involving economic development. Steve became a Coleman Entrepreneurship Fellow at UNCG and created and taught ENT/GEO/LIS 530: Researching Opportunities in Entrepreneurship & Economic Development in the spring semester. He is now serving as the Assistant Director of the Coleman Fellows Program at UNCG. He co-wrote two book chapters with Professor Williamson: "Export Odyssey Student Team-Based Experiential Project in International Marketing: Structure, Relevant Processes, and Commentary" for the book Handbook of Experiential Learning in International Business and Management, and "Export Odyssey and the Single Individual as the Scale-Economic Size of the U.S. Exporting Firm" for the book Global Entrepreneurship. Steve's spring 2014 syllabus to his

ENT/GEO/LIB 530 class will be published as an appendix in the book Entrepreneurship Across Campus in 2014-15.

Kathy Crowe continued working with colleagues to implement the recommendations of the Liaison Task Force. She completed the Libraries' responses to SACS standards CR 2.9, CS 3.8.1, 3.8.2, and 3.8.3 by responding to edits from internal and external reviewers. The Libraries were judged as compliant in all responses in the Compliance Certification report of September 2013. Kathy coordinated the Libraries' submission to Compliance Assist which forms the basis of one section of the Libraries' annual report. She coordinated and edited "UNCG University Libraries' Support of High Impact Practices," which documented the Libraries' extensive support of these practices proven to impact student success and retention. Additional assessment projects Kathy contributed to include a report on the Faculty Research Needs survey, a space assessment of both Jackson and Schiffman Libraries and analyzing the narrative responses to the LibQual 2012 survey. In the area of scholarship Kathy provided several presentations at the regional and international level including: "Working by Committee: Formal and Informal Assessment Collaborations-- Assessment Committees and Beyond". Southeastern Library Assessment Conference; "Defining the Libraries' Role in Research: A Needs Assessment Case Study", LAUNC-CH Conference (with Mike Crumpton); "Models for Liaison Services". ASERL Summertime Summit (with Michelle Hayslett); and "Using Evidence to Develop Library Learning Spaces", Shanghai University of Finance and Economics, Shanghai, China. Kathy continued to serve as the faculty advisor to the Student Libraries Advisory Council. She also served as the Libraries' representative to the UNCG Faculty Senate and the Institutional Effectiveness Committee.

Mike Crumpton focused this year on strategizing budget cuts and planning for the expansion of the digital media commons. He was active with his professional organizations including program chair for NCLA and presenting at NCLA, ALA, ALISE, SCUP and SHRM sponsored events. He continues as chair of the NCLA Leadership Institute, currently planning the 2014 event. He also continued to write a quarterly column for The Bottom Line: Managing Library Finances. Mike served on various committees including campus committees; Senate Budget Committee and the Research Advisory Council. In-house he chaired the Student Worker Supervisors Group and the Grant Oversight Committee. He also worked on several collaborative projects with the Department of Library and Information Science such as shared presentations and co-principle investigator for the 3rd ACE Scholars grant from IMLS. Mike was also an adjunct instructor for the management and community college courses which used this co-authored monograph published this year.

Jenny Dale served as the Chair of UNCG's Undergraduate Curriculum Committee for the 2013-2014 academic year and continues to serve on several other university committees. At the state level, Jenny serves as the Vice-Chair of the North Carolina Library Association's Technology and Trends Round Table and as Co-Chair of NCBIG, the library instruction interest group. When she is not coordinating the Libraries' First-Year Instruction Program, Jenny works closely with the English Department as their library liaison, and works with Amy Harris Houk to provide liaison support to Communication Studies. She serves as the Humanities Team leader in the libraries' new liaison team structure, and also continues to serve as one of the coordinators of the Jackson Library Reference Intern program, a selective program for Library and Information Studies graduate students. Last year, she co-authored two book chapters and presented at one national, two regional, and one state conference.

Sarah Dorsey was awarded the first Fellowship in Sustainability with the FTLC. This supported her work with the UNCG Sustainability Film and Discussion Series in its 8th year, attendance at the AASHE (Association for the Advancement of Sustainability in Higher Education) and SAM (Society for American Music) conferences and work locally with Green Drinks, a sustainability networking organization. Additionally Sarah presented a three-hour workshop at the SEMLA Annual Meeting on Music Collection Development with a colleague. She also presented at two Sustainability Workshops on campus (August and January). Sarah's work on the biography of composer Louise Talma (Composing Her Way: The Life and Music of Louise Talma) continued with a three-week residency at VCCA (Virginia Center for the Creative Arts) in the spring and at Wildacres, a writing workshop in Western North Carolina.

Christine Fischer was the faculty recipient of the UNCG 2014 Supervisory Recognition Award. She presented on the panel, "Let's Talk about Streaming: Providing the Resources that Faculty and Students Request," at the 33rd Annual Charleston Conference. Along with colleagues Cheryl Cross and Cathy Rothermel, she presented "Streaming Film: How to Serve Our Users" at the North Carolina Serials Conference. Fischer completed her term as secretary for the Resources and Technical Services Section (RTSS) of the North Carolina Library Association, was elected as co-director of the section, and served on the RTSS planning committee for the Biennial NCLA Conference. She served on the planning committee for the North Carolina Serials Conference, including serving as chair of the speaker subcommittee.

Keith Phelan Gorman's fourth year at UNCG has been busy, productive, and professionally rewarding. It has been a year of change and growth for Special Collections and University Archives (SCUA) at University Libraries. Gorman oversaw a department reorganization that established four teams: Collections, University Archives, Public Services, and Preservation. He sought to better align the department's reference and instructional services with the rest of the Library through coordinating faculty outreach efforts, adopting Chat, assigning a SCUA representative to each liaison teams, and changing how statistics are being recorded. In community outreach, Gorman devoted significant time to promote the department's collections, services, and digital projects through collection tours (Tea and Tours), off-campus presentations (Well Spring/UNCG initiative and Pennybyrn initiative), off campus instruction (North Carolina Lit Map). Gorman was also very busy with six presentations at state, regional, and national conferences. He also had a poster session at the Society of American Archivists.

Cathy Griffith was promoted to Head, Access Services on January 1, 2014 after serving as Interim Head since July 1, 2013. She is a 2013/14 participant of the UNCG Leadership Institute. She chaired the Libraries' Technology Lending Working Group and served as an ex officio member of the Self Check Working Group. This year she attended the ILLiad International Conference and the Southeast WorldShare Management Community Gathering.

Karen Grigg served on the Collection Development team, the Data Services Librarian Search Committee, and the Science Liaison Team. Karen served on the biomedical advisory boards for EBSCO and McGraw-Hill in 2014. She served on the ACRL/STS's Research Committee, Research Agenda Task Force and co-chairs the STS Innovation Award Task Force. She is Social Media Coordinator for ANCHASL. Karen co-presented on liaison services and challenges at Library 2.013. She also presented at the "Transfer Students and the Library" workshop at Appalachian State University, on Data Management activities at Science Boot Camp Southeast, and moderated the STS Forum for Science and Technology Library Research at ALA. Karen attended NCLA, ALA Midwinter and Annual, NCLITE, NC BIG, Metrolina, and two ANCHASL meetings. She also attended multiple seminars and workshops, including the Science Boot Camp Southeast, and received the 2013-2014 EBSCO Annual Conference Scholarship for ALA. Karen led science activities in an elementary school.

David Gwynn supervised seven new and eight continuing digital projects during 2013-2014. His primary projects was the completion and public launch of the $203,000 LSTA grant-funded Textiles, Teachers, and Troops project, which provided over 180,000 digital images and was launched with a public reception and presentation at the Greensboro Historical Museum in April. Other new projects included the Community Collections initiative (funded through a $3000 internal CBR grant) and digitization of the Randall Jarrell and Robert Watson Papers, selections from the Department of Theatre Records, the Home Economics Pamphlet Collection, the American Publishers Trade Bindings Collection, and the University Archives Reference Collection ("Class of" folders). Work also continued on the Women Veterans Historical Project, Oral History Collections, and two scrapbook collections. David coordinated the addition of most UNCG digital collections to Worldcat and the Digital Public Library of America; UNCG is now the third largest contributor in the state to DPLA behind UNC Chapel Hill and the State Library. He developed most of the content for the UNCG Copyright Resources website. David was also a guest lecturer in two LIS courses and one Public History course and supervised a practicum student, an independent study student, and several interns. He attended six professional conferences and made several professional and community presentations. David also participated in community outreach, assisting with digital collections at several local high schools, churches, colleges, and community groups.

Paul Hessling completed second phase of the 5-month Special Collections exhibition, “A Fine Suit of Clothes”, selecting, researching, documenting and displaying materials in four cases. He co-taught a session of LIS 641 (Cataloging and Classification) on authority control and the construction and control of personal names. Paul proposed final stage of American Trade Bindings digital project and selected materials for scanning. He prepared an application for NACO membership (Name Authority Cooperative Program of the national Program for Cooperative Cataloging). Paul arranged in-house NACO training and serves as the NACO contact for the University Libraries, with responsibility for answering NACO related questions, training catalogers, and reviewing all authority records submitted to the NACO/Library of Congress authority file.

Gerald Holmes served on the Chancellor’s Advisory Committee for the Office of Equity, Diversity and Inclusion. He served on the African American Studies (AFS) Programs’ Whitney "Whitty" Ransome Scholarship Selection Committee and received a special Outstanding Service Award for his service as AFS Library Liaison. Danny Nanez worked with Metadata Cataloger Anna Craft to add new features to NCDOCKS (<http://libres.uncg.edu/ir/>). NCDOCKS' OAI interface was updated to increase speed and usability. NCDOCKS was upgraded to give administrators the ability to export MARC XML for multiple IR Items. This makes it easier for IR records to be added to Library Catalogs. Another NCDOCKS upgrade allows administrators to delete IR files. This keeps the IR server from wasting valuable drive space. Danny worked with Information Technology Librarian Terry Brandsma to build a SSIS (SQL Server Integration Services) application that regularly emails OCLC WMS reports to Library staff. Working with Digital Projects Coordinator David Gwynn, Danny built an application that can harvest data from ContentDM servers. This allows for completely customizable web sites to be built without ContentDM server site restrictions. This application is currently being used in the Textiles, Teachers, and Troops (<http://library.uncg.edu/dp/tt>) and the Database on American Slavery (<http://library.uncg.edu/beta/slavery/>). Danny updated the University Libraries' hours programming (<http://library.uncg.edu>) to change the hours on our web site when the library is closed due to inclement weather. Danny updated the University Libraries' Collaboratory Scheduler (<http://library.uncg.edu/ressched/>) to give students a single web site to make a reservation. Previously there were 3 websites a student could use to make a reservation.
